

Connections

Dimension 3: Culturally Sustaining

OER challenge historic methods of legitimising academia and recognise and celebrate each learner’s culture, inviting learners to engage with a topic through the richness of their own lens.

Evaluating OER against the Connections criterion

The Equity Rubric for OER Evaluation gives a resource a high rating for Connections if it “critically centres around learners’ home and community experiences.”

The Rubric suggests looking for “content that allows students to include their daily home and community experiences as part of the learning process.”

Key Examples and Suggestions

Resource	Description	Link
Glossary task	Empower students to create meaning of key concepts by developing their own glossary using personal anecdotes that contextualise the idea in a way that makes sense for them. This task can be set individually or collaboratively with students working on a class glossary where multiple definition entries and non-text-based (e.g. memes, audio, video) are enabled for each concept. This task can be incorporated into an OER through the use of H5P.	Documentation Tool Create a template with key terms for the learner to define.
TikTok videos reflecting	A college course in California uses TikTok videos to show examples of how the “same” language can be quite different in different	TikTok video: How do you say

Resource	Description	Link
learners' communities	cultures (Orozco, CAL OER 2022). For example, one TikTok video showed students who spoke Spanish at home receiving feedback that, on a Spanish language test at school, they got words such as "pen" incorrect because they use a different word for "pen" in their culture or dialect. When the education system and materials are not tailored to the relevant community context, they implicitly teach learners they speak the "wrong" type of Spanish, that their culture is wrong. Incorporating videos that celebrate the diverse range of vocabulary and cultures within a language empowers learners to leverage their community experiences and feel a sense of pride and connection.	"pen" in Spanish?
GRSJ 224 Wiki by University of British Columbia students	This living OER is continuously developed by future cohorts of students who build on the work of their peers. The course instructor, Janice Stewart, discusses the importance of the Wiki as an OER for their course: "Official knowledge represents a very partial aggregate of culture because it is mapped in ways that typically exclude members of marginalized groups. Participatory technologies, such as the GRSJ 224 WIKI, enable active relationships to public knowledge and new forms of educational innovation and participatory citizenship."	GRSJ 224 Wiki

Resource	Description	Link
Wikis for Teaching by Arts ISIT, University of British Columbia	This online resource provides guidance for why and how to use Wikis as OER. It includes real life case studies to explore.	Wikis for Teaching

Table of key examples and suggestions demonstrating the Connections criterion of the Culturally Sustaining dimension.

Suggest an Example